

Liz Romer, Bio

Liz Romer FNP, DNP, has been a family nurse practitioner in the field of adolescent health for 17 years. She serves as the Director of the BC4U Program at Children's Hospital Colorado. She built this program to reduce barriers and provide comprehensive sexual health care for youth under the age of 25. She believes the greatest impact is in trusting and connecting youth with the power to control their reproductive futures.

Liz pursued many pathways to broaden and disseminate the impact of programs like BC4U. She created a hands-on contraceptive training program to build provider confidence and competency in counseling and procedures. She worked with a local school district to support the delivery of comprehensive sex education and bridge the gap between schools and clinics. Lastly, recognizing the digital lives of teens, she and a team developed a customizable web experience for teens to feel more comfortable in accessing care.

Wearing her newest hat as Project Director for the Colorado Collaborative for Reproductive Health Equity, Liz was hired by local foundations to develop funding strategies to improve the delivery of high quality, culturally responsive patient-centered reproductive health care across Colorado. She is deeply challenged and engaged in making sure all Coloradans have access to the care they deserve.
